Did anyone look into setting up BLAST locally?
Once you have the BLAST executable installed, the next step is to get some databases set up for it. Let's walk through the installation instructions. There are a variety of different databases that we could pull down. I went with one of the larger ones.

- You can also use your own data files in FASTA format.
- Either way, you need to use formatdb to get things set up the right way.
Still nothing due until the finals period.
